From the Editor

For me, the exciting part of working with New England Rare Coin Galleries has always been watching this company's growth — not only in size, but in the type of collector services it provides. Last month, we announced New England's new "Rare Coin Guild" — a rare coin acquisition program that collectors can join for as little as $100 a month. This month, we'd like to remind you of another "new" New England venture — the second portion of the Don Warner Political Memorabilia Sale, scheduled for August 8.

As regular Inventory Selections readers know, the first portion of the Don Warner Sale was held April 4 in New York City, and the prices realized for Mr. Warner's political buttons, ribbons and other campaign collectibles totaled $170,000. One exceedingly rare 1920 celluloid button from the unsuccessful presidential campaign of James M. Cox brought $30,000 — three times its estimated value, and a record price for a single political campaign button offered to the public.

If you'd like to participate in the second Don Warner Sale, or if you're simply anxious to learn more about political memorabilia, send $5 for New England Rare Coin Auctions' Don Warner Political Memorabilia Catalog. The address: NERCA, P.O. Box 1776, Boston, MA 02105.

The growth of New England also means that its staff's professional roles are continually expanding to serve your needs. This is why, beginning next issue, Ann Marie Reis, formerly an Inventory Selections Assistant Editor, will become Editor of New England's monthly numismatic catalog. But though I leave this column, I'll still be here at New England, providing a guiding hand to Ann Marie, and to all of New England's communications staff, in order to bring you the market's finest coin offerings and to keep you up-to-date on all our collector services.

Market Report

by Martin Paul
New England Numismatist

At the shows

Trading activity was brisk and lively last month at the Long Beach Coin and Stamp Show, held in Long Beach, Florida, and the Garden State Numismatic Association Show held in Cherry Hill, New Jersey. At both events, high-quality specimens attracted strong bidder attention and commanded premiums well over bid level. Top material also fared well at New England Rare Coin Auctions' Long Beach I Sale (held in conjunction with the Coin and Stamp Show), and the Superior Auction, held in Los Angeles, California. This was confirmed by the fact that several specimens of Proof Barber Dimes traded in the $2,200 range.

In general, the wholesale market is flourishing at a 10% higher level than four or five months ago, and this upswing is reflected in many coin series. Specifically, commemoratives and common-date silver dollars in MS-65 condition or better are experiencing solid price advances. An increasing number of Want Lists also include Uncirculated type gold coins. Meanwhile, BU rolls from 1934 to date and late-date Proof sets show mixed trading on the market. At current price levels, many dealers find it difficult to locate hairline-free and spot-free Proof sets from 1936-1942, and Walking Liberty Half Dollars in MS-65 condition or better. Collectors are apparently holding onto their material while waiting for prices to advance further.

Proof and business strike type coins in the MS-60 to MS-63 range are also increasing in popularity. Since these specimens are available at a fraction of the cost of those in MS-65 condition, a rising number of collector/investors are including the MS-60/63 coins in their numismatic portfolios.

Gold

Gold bullion plunged $20 since last month's report and settled at the $462 level. Bullion coins, such as Kruggerands, Maple Leafs and Mexican Pesos, have adjusted accordingly. Though dealers continue to pay substantial premiums for Uncirculated type gold, these coins are absent from the market at today's low levels. Specimens in Proof condition, particularly Liberty Head Quarter Eagles and Indian Head Eagles, are showing slow price advances. One dealer has had limited success in filling his Want List for Proof $3 gold pieces.

Silver

Silver bullion dropped below the $10 level last month, but has since been fluctuating in the $10.20 to $10.50 range. In the collectible coin area, common-date silver dollar rolls and Morgan Dollars in MS-65 are actively being sought. Many Want Lists also include Proof 1942 Jefferson Nickels, Mercury Dimes and Walking Liberty Half Dollars. These coins quickly vanish from bourse floors at what many dealers consider "bargain" prices.

BU rolls from 1934 to date have seen split trading activity during the past few weeks, with some issues selling at premium levels, while others are suffering moderate price declines. Meanwhile, Mercury Dimes have taken a further dip in price. In general, Walking Liberty Half Dollars in "original" rolls are absent from the market. Instead, most rolls being offered are either "put together" or are of overall low quality.

Commemoratives

The commemorative market is still experiencing rapid price advances, with many issues enjoying more than a 25% increase since one month ago. This surge is not strictly limited to Uncirculated specimens, however, since several commemoratives in EF/AU condition show strong gains. Current market leaders include the Maryland Tercentenary Half Dollar, the Texas Centennial Half Dollar and the San Diego Exposition Half Dollar.

Gold commemoratives, which have been a neglected area of the market for more than a year, are appearing on a rising number of Want Lists. Presently, the demand for specimens in MS-65 condition or better far exceeds the available supply. Market analysts predict significant price advances in this segment of the market.

Copper

Uncirculated Half Cents, Large Cents and early Lincoln Cents showing full Mint red luster are being sought extensively on bourse floors throughout the country. In fact, MS-65/70 pre-1934 Denver and San Francisco Lincoln Cents are commanding impressive premiums. Indian Cents have taken a slight dip in price, but exceptional pieces are still trading hands well above bid levels.

Liberty "Walks" On Silver

by Ed Kalp, New England Numismatist
with Ann Marie Reis

The Walking Liberty Half Dollar, minted from 1916 to 1947, is clearly one of our nation's most beautiful coins. The majestic figure of Liberty, striding with dignity and splendor toward a rising sun, is numismatic art at its best. Her hand is outstretched in an offer of hope and freedom. She is cloaked in an American flag that gracefully floats behind her in the breeze. The result is an unusual feeling of movement and depth that is rarely found on American coins.

This vibrant, life-like design, created by famous sculptor/medalist Adolph A. Weinman, was part of a major revamping effort that touched virtually all of our minor silver coinage in 1916. For years, both the general public and the numismatic fraternity had been complaining that the existing design of Liberty — which appeared on the dime, quarter and half dollar — was sedate and boring. The "mere heads" of 1892, designed by Mint Engraver Charles E. Barber, had lost their appeal. The Treasury Department, however, had to wait for the 25 years required by law to lapse before the unpopular design of Liberty could be changed.

Early in 1916, the Mint invited more than 50 noted sculptors from across the nation to prepare designs for the dime, quarter and half dollar, since the three denominations were finally eligible for revisions. Mint Director R.W. Woolley, who felt that aesthetics on our coinage was of the utmost importance, conferred with the Commission of Fine Arts when making selections. After a careful reviewing process, Hermon A. MacNeil was commissioned to design the Standing Liberty Quarter, and Adolph A. Weinman was commissioned to design the dime and half dollar.

Weinman, a New York sculptor, was considered a leading talent of the day. His work appeared on dozens of medals and a number of monuments across the country, including the Lincoln Statue at Hudgenville, Kentucky, and the Statue of Alexander Cassatt in the Pennsylvania Railroad Terminal in New York City. Weinman was born in Karlsruhe, Germany, 1870, he came to the United States at age 10, and began an apprenticeship to a wood and ivory carver. He studied drawing and modelling at Cooper Institute before entering the studio of Philip Martiny at age 20. Weinman also attended the Art Students' League of New York, and spent time studying under renowned American sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens. During his career, he designed the Medal of Award for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, the Medal of Honor for the American Institute of Architects and a U.S. Medal for Lifesaving on Railroads.

He also designed the J. Sanford Saltus Medal Award, first given in 1919 by the American Numismatic Society for distinguished achievement in the art of medal. James Earle Fraser (creator of the Buffalo Nickel) received the honor that year, but Weinman was named recipient in 1920. (Other notables included Hermon A. MacNeil, Victor D. Brenner, designer of the Lincoln Cent, and Anthony deFrancisci, designer of the Peace Dollar.)

Shortly after Weinman and MacNeil were announced the winners of the competition, they were invited to the Philadelphia Mint to become acquainted to coinage procedures. Reportedly, Assistant Engraver George T. Morgan was friendly and accommodating, but Mint Engraver Charles E. Barber was sullen and sulky because his designs were to be replaced.

Weinman immediately went to work modifying his original sketches. Some coin historians believe he used a young woman named Elsie Stevens as a model of Liberty for both the dime and half dollar. The general consensus, however, is that she posed for what later became known as the Mercury Dime.

Weinman is said to have been inspired by the French design of "Le Semeuse" (the sower) which appeared on French coinage.

For the Walking Liberty Half Dollar, Weinman is said to have been inspired by the popular French design of "Le Semeuse" (the sower), which was created by the famous French engraver Roty. "Le Semeuse" appeared on the 50 centime from 1897-1920, on both the one franc and two franc from 1898-1920, and again on the one franc and five franc from 1960 to date. There are marked similarities between the two designs, and some critics have argued that Weinman's half dollar is a direct copy of Roty's Liberty. Both, in fact, show a full-length figure of Liberty walking toward a rising sun. The Roty design has Liberty carrying a bag of grain in one arm, and casting grain with the other. Weinman's version shows her carrying laurel and oak branches in one arm, symbolic of civil and military glory. She reaches her right arm out toward war torn Europe. Weinman's Liberty also wears Roman cross-thonged sandals and a close-fitting cap reminiscent of ancient Greek and Roman art. These emblems were not unlike those that Roty used in other French coin and medal designs.

It is also interesting to note the distinct similarities between Weinman's half dollar and the 1907 $20 gold piece created by Augustus Saint Gaudens. Both artists used symmetrical lines and exquisite detail on their designs. To create the illusion of movement, Saint Gaudens also used a loosely flowing gown gently swirling in the background. Liberty is walking forward and the sun's rays are evident in the background. The likeness of the two designs is not surprising when remembering that Weinman was once a student of Saint Gaudens. At one point, Saint Gaudens collaborated with Weinman to create a 1904 inaugural medal for President Theodore Roosevelt.

The reverse of the half dollar was an original design that shows an eagle perched high on a mountain crag, exuding confidence and fearlessness. His wings are unfolded as if he is ready to take flight. The branch of a pine tree is visible near the eagle's talons. Though Mint Director Woolley referred to this as "a sapling of Mountain Pine, symbolic of America," some critics question his conclusion because a pine tree is not exclusively American. Perhaps it symbolizes heartiness and growth, since our nation had an abundance of timberland at that time.

Weinman completed several patterns before a final design was adopted. One simply lacks the engraver's initials, another shows Liberty much taller, the eagle placed lower, and the word "LIBERTY" above the motto "IN GOD WE TRUST" instead of around the edge of the coin. A third pattern is similar to the adopted design, except it has a much smaller date that does not extend beyond Liberty's foot in either direction.

Some experts claim the final design was not the most suitable because, in most cases, production coins are somewhat weakly struck. Liberty's head-cap and branch hand are undefined, as are the stars and stripes of the flag and the eagle's breast and leg feathers. In 1918, the Mint tried to strengthen the design by incising the details of Liberty's garment. Three other times during the life span of the coin, Mint officials modified the design, but even later issues fail, in general, to show full central details. Sharp strikes are usually found only on the Matte Proofs of 1916-1917 and brilliant Proofs of 1936-1942.

In 1916, the Mercury Dime, Standing Liberty Quarter and Walking Liberty Half Dollar were introduced. For the first time in the history of U.S. coinage, the three denominations had separate designs.

New designs released

Late in 1916, the new designs were released for the Walking Liberty Half Dollar, Standing Liberty Quarter, and Mercury Dime. As Mint Director Woolley wrote in his annual report: "For the first time in the history of our coinage there are separate designs for each of the three denominations and their beauty and quality, from a numismatic standpoint, have been highly praised by all having expertise in such matters."

Grading

Our grading system is patterned after that of the American Numismatic Association's numerical grading standards. Where appropriate for greatest accuracy, additional intermediate grades are also used. Our designations are:

Poor	1
Fair	2
About Good	3
Good	4,6
Very Good	8,10
Fine	12,15
Very Fine	20,25,30,35
Extremely Fine	40,45
About Uncirculated	50,53,55,58
Mint State	60,63,64,65,66,67,68,69,70
Proof	60,63,64,65,66,67,68,69,70

Slash grades indicate obverse/reverse designations. For example, a grade of MS-65/63 describes a coin with an obverse of Mint State-65 and a reverse of Mint State-63. Mishandled Proofs will be graded as any circulated coin, and may be classified as Proof-40 (denoting an Extremely Fine coin) or Proof-55, etc.

1949-1950 Franklin Half Dollars

These attractive coins were struck in honor of Benjamin Franklin, famous American inventor, statesman, scientist and writer. For the obverse, Mint Engraver John R. Sinnock slightly modified a profile of Franklin used for a medal issued by the Mint in 1933. The reverse shows the Liberty Bell, the same design that Sinnock created for the 1926 Sesquicentennial of American Independence Commemorative Half Dollar.

We offer both 1949 and 1950 Franklin Half Dollars at the following special prices:

1850, PROOF-60, CAMEO. A discovery coin, first Proof 1850 Quarter Eagle known to surface since year of issue. Wire rim on both obverse and reverse. Very light hairlines that in no way detract from its beauty. Brilliant mirror surfaces. Four tiny planchet indenta- tions visible on coin's obverse in front of Liberty's nose. Reportedly two Proofs were struck, notes Akers. Breen writes, "Unknown, though at least one must have been struck in Proof for the set made up for the Congressional Committee on the library, per Patterson letter of 9/26/50." A few light adjustment marks on eagle's right leg and left claw, that are detected only under high magnification. An impor- tant coin and worth.....	45,000.00

The coins were favorably received by both the general public and the working press. The Walking Liberty Half Dollar, in particular, was applauded for its artistic merit and life-like characteristics. The New York Sun praised the coin as "lively," typifying "hustle." The Boston Herald referred to it as "... a reminder of our advanced and advancing status as a nation" and said the half dollar had "... a forward look on its face." People were excited by its aesthetic appeal, which was dramatically different from the old-style Barber Half Dollar.

The exquisite design of the Walking Liberty Half Dollar was far different from its predecessor, the Barber Half Dollar.

But the Walking Liberty design had its share of critics. Some complained that the word "LIBERTY" was obscured by the figure on the coin. Others, as previously mentioned, attacked the origin of the design. Many insisted that the sun on the obverse was setting rather than rising, though this argument conflicts with the optimistic theme of the design. A segment of the numismatic population argued that the eagle was artistically pleasing, but not natural. As one critic wrote in a 1917 issue of The Numismatist: "Mr. Weinman's eagle has long legs and wears feather chaps; from the shoulder joined to end of tail extremely long; wing, if folded would reach leg and the tail; end of wings rounded and the feathers impossible; and the left wing in an impossible position." Overall, the plaudits outweighed the objections and the coin soon became accepted in numismatic circles.

The Walking Liberty Half Dollar was minted for 32 years until the Benjamin Franklin design was introduced in 1948. The only regular issue varieties involve coins struck at the branch mints. Coins produced at Denver and San Francisco in 1916, and the early part of 1917, have the mintmark on the obverse under the motto "IN GOD WE TRUST." All later issues have the mintmark on the reverse at the left, under the pine branch. Apparently, Mint officials felt the mintmark was too conspicuous on the obverse of the coin. Interestingly enough, the mintmarks on this series are among the smallest of our coinage.

Another unofficial variety involves the 1941 and 1942 Proof coins that are without designer's initials. It is generally agreed that this variety resulted from overpolished dies, since there are some known specimens with partial initials. In any case, Proof coins from this period are exceptionally beautiful, showing full strikes and virtually all of the design detail intended by the artist. Today, collectors can buy a 1941 Walking Liberty Half Dollar, with initials, for about $1,000 in Proof-65. Another specimen, lacking initials, would carry an additional 50% premium.

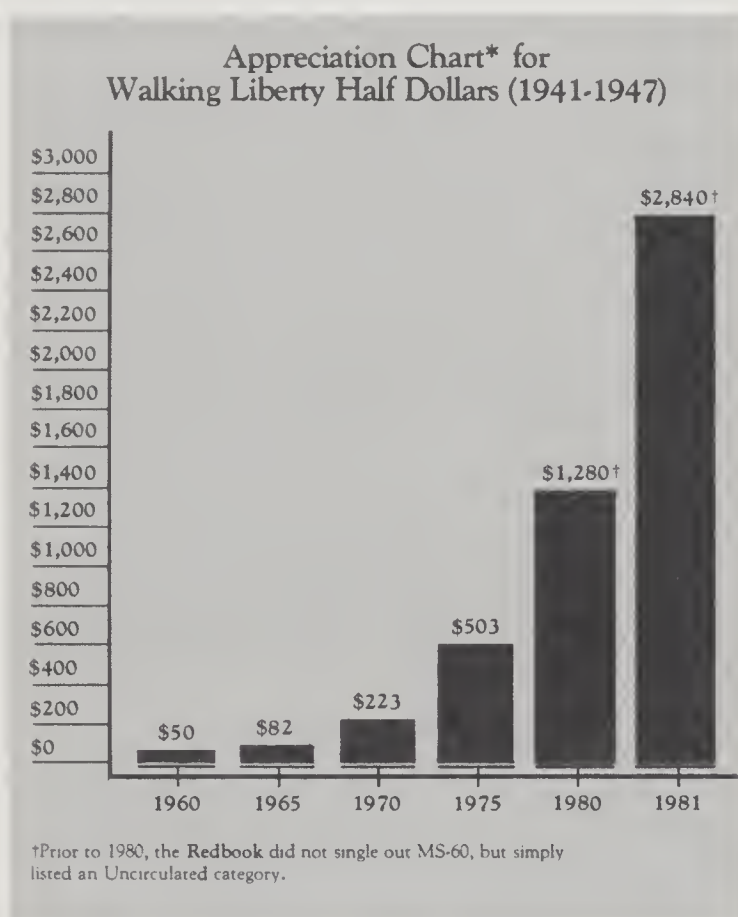

The numismatic fraternity considers this series extremely erratic because there were many years of non-issuance. In addition, several dates were produced at only one, or two of the three minting facilities. In 1933, for instance, only the San Francisco Mint struck half dollars. In 1940, the coins were produced at Philadelphia and San Francisco, but not Denver. This occurred in part because half dollars are bulky, cumbersome coins that have never been widely accepted as pocket change. In contrast, the demand for quarters, dimes, and nickels has always been strong since these coins are readily used in small business transactions.

Walking Liberty Half Dollars also have an abundance of low mintage dates. Fifty of the 65 coins in the series have a mintage of under 10 million, and nine are under one million. Consider the fact that the 1943 Philadelphia issue of 53,190,000 half dollars was the highest mintage of the series. That same year, a total of 191,710,000 Mercury Dimes and 271,165,000 Buffalo Nickels were produced at the Philadelphia Mint. The difference in quantity is astounding.

This mintage roadblock makes it challenging for a collector or investor to complete a full, 65-piece set of Walking Liberty Half Dollars in Uncirculated condition, particularly coins in MS-65 or above. The limited supply is compounded by the fact that issues struck from 1916 to 1921 are extremely elusive in top condition because there were no Morgan Dollars produced during that period. As a result, many of these half dollars were placed in circulation and subsequently lost or damaged. The 1921-S, though the fifth lowest mintage of the series, is considered the rarest in Uncirculated condition and is currently valued at $35,000 in MS-65 condition.

Today, the majority of collectors interested in Walking Liberty Half Dollars attempt to put together a 20-coin "short" set from 1941-1947. Most dates are reasonably easy to locate and relatively affordable, since a set can be purchased for about $3,000 in MS-65. Other collectors venture into an "extended short set" which includes issues from 1934-1947. Many dates from the 1930's are fairly scarce in Uncirculated condition.

Key dates in the series include the 1921 Philadelphia and Denver issues, the 1919-S, and the 1938-D, which has a mintage of 491,600. In general, collectors will have the most difficulty obtaining Uncirculated specimens from the San Francisco Mint that are well struck and free from bagmarks. Many dates, such as the 1927-S, and 1928-S, have full heads, but show weakly struck skirt and hand lines. One reason for the inferior striking quality is because dies at that Mint were sometimes used longer than their working life. Mint officials often had to wait days for replacements to be shipped thousands of miles from Philadelphia. Coins struck in San Francisco were also subject to a greater degree of bagmarks because of the lengthy transportation involved in shipping them back east, where the majority of U.S. banks were located.

Over the years, Walking Liberty Half Dollars have experienced a number of pricing "highs" and "lows," but each peak has exceeded that of the previous cycle. In other words, the overall pricing trend is upward. When the 1947 issue of A Guidebook of United States Coins by R.S. Yeoman first appeared, a 1941-1947 "short" set catalogued at a mere $22 in Uncirculated condition. The entire series was valued at $975 in Uncirculated condition. Since that time, Walking Liberty Half Dollars have escalated at a phenomenal rate. Today, a collector would have to pay in excess of $50,000 for a 65-piece set in MS-65 condition.

In the current market, prices of Walking Liberty Half Dollars are again beginning to climb, but at a slower, steadier pace. Collectors, who see that prices are not artificially inflated, are reentering the market in droves. Meanwhile, investors, impressed with the financial potential of rare coins in general, are turning to the series because of its aesthetic merit and silver content. They realize that Walking Liberty Half Dollars, with their rare artistic beauty, are valuable additions to any numismatic collection.

New England Auction Report

As this issue of Inventory Selections goes to press, New England Rare Coin Auctions is busy compiling last-minute results from the successful Long Beach I sale, held June 4-6 in Long Beach, California. At the same time, the auction division is gearing up for the second portion of the Don Warner Sale, which will highlight an intriguing selection of historical campaign buttons, ribbons, medals and tokens. This sale is scheduled for August 8 in Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

Long Beach wrap-up

Long Beach I featured more than 2,000 numismatic treasures, many of which were rare, first-year specimens. Bidding was lively and spirited, and several pieces sold at levels far higher than anticipated. In total, the sale realized an impressive $1,214,157.

1803 Bust Dollar

One auction standout was clearly the 1803 Bust Dollar 'Presentation Piece' in Proof-60, which was struck from polished dies on a polished blank. This classic piece traded hands for a solid $19,000.

Another show-stopper was a rare 1863 Liberty $10 Gold Piece in Cameo Proof-65 which received strong bidder attention and commanded a solid $24,000. Gold highlights also included a handsome 1795/5 Half Eagle in AU-50 that sold for $11,000 and a 1901 Liberty $20 Gold Piece in Proof-63 that brought $9,500.

In the silver category, a major one-year type 1796 Browning -2 Quarter in AU-50 traded hands at the $15,500 level. Another key that attracted active bidding was a 1796-5 Berries Dime in AU-50, which was the first regular issue dime in the United States. This specimen brought $5,400.

Silver highlights also included a toned 1900 Morgan Dollar in Proof-67 which realized $3,250, and an elusive 1794 Valentine-4a Half Dime in EF-40, which brought $3,750. This was the earliest dated half dime in the United States.

Bidding was particularly heavy for many of the copper issues, particularly a 1793 Liberty Cap Half Cent in VF-30 which is rarely seen in higher than Fine condition. This item sold for $5,300. Other copper notables included a 1794 Large Cent in AU-50, which brought $3,100, and an 1820 Large Cent in MS-63, which sold for $1,400.

Don Warner Sale preview

The Don Warner Sale will feature over 400 rare political artifacts in exceptional condition. Among the highlights is a 1920 Cox-Roosevelt jugate button that is one of only 20 known and valued at $2,000. Another key is an unusual 1932 "Statue of Liberty" jugate button that is one of six known. This specimen is expected to bring $1,200.

1900 McKinley Hobby Horse Button

Several items dating from the McKinley era will be auctioned, including an exceedingly rare 1896 jugate button showing McKinley and his running mate bicycling to the White House. Another item, which has McKinley riding a hobby horse, is considered among the top cartoon buttons in the hobby.

A number of artifacts from the Roosevelt campaign show elaborate detail and an impressive state of preservation. One colorful specimen, which celebrates Roosevelt's return from Africa in 1910, should draw strong bidder attention.

In all, the event is expected to attract political memorabilia hobbyists from across the nation. For a copy of the auction catalog, or for further information concerning the Don Warner Sale, feel free to contact our auction division toll-free: 800-225-6794. In Massachusetts: 617-227-8800.

The Auction Block

Rare Coin Auctions.)

Collectors often ask me about the benefits of selling rare coins through public auctions. Many people are unfamiliar with this sales option, unaware of its financial advantages, and simply feel more comfortable selling directly to a rare coin dealer. They don't realize that, in many cases, the auction route is the most profitable.

The reasons why auctions are often more profitable than direct sale are clear. Direct sale does offer the advantages of surety and speed — that is, when you sell to a reputable dealer, he will make you a firm offer for your coin, so that you'll be sure of the selling price before you commit to the sale, and the dealer will pay you virtually on-the-spot. However, dealers are businessmen, and like all businessmen, they must make a profit on anything they buy for their inventory. Consequently, dealers buy at price levels below current retail prices so that they can resell their purchases quickly. The only instance in which a dealer might offer you a price above current retail is if you are selling an extremely rare piece which hasn't been offered on the market in some time.

In contrast, a collector who decides to auction his coins often stands an excellent chance of selling at price levels above current retail. This is because, in the weeks spanning the time when the collector consigns to auction and the actual auction date, major auction companies vigorously promote the auction in major numismatic, investment, and consumer publications. Such promotion helps attract hundreds of collectors and investors to the auction — individuals whose buying habits are quite different from dealers. Collectors, for example, may go to great lengths to buy a particular coin because of its aesthetic beauty or historic importance. Investors buy high because they are primarily concerned with long-term gains — i.e.

they believe that the coins they buy today will sell even higher in years to come.

At an auction, these collectors and investors join dealers in competing for your rare coins. Because of the sheer number of buyers competing for the coins, and because of the motivations of these buyers, enthusiastic, lively bidding takes place. As a result, the buying prices of coins are driven higher and higher, and many coins trade hands at, or well above, current retail levels.

At a recent sale conducted by New England Rare Coin Auctions, for example, a 1929-D Walking Liberty Half Dollar, fully struck and in MS-65 condition, drew spirited bidding attention when it was offered. (The coin was a rarity because Walking Liberty Halves from the Denver Mint seldom appear in such high condition.) In the end, the coin traded for $5,000 — well above its retail value of $3,500.

Of course, not every coin sells for this great a margin above its retail value at auction. Some coins, in fact, may not be right for auction at all. Others, however, will bring substantially higher selling prices if offered at auction rather than through direct sale. If you have any questions about which coins in your collection you should sell at auction, please don't hesitate to give me a call toll-free: 800-225-6794. In Massachusetts: 617-227-8800.

Currency

As this issue goes to press, the 81st International Paper Money Show in Memphis, Tennessee, has just gotten underway and buying activity is booming. The clear leaders are Uncut Sheets of Small Size Currency and Large Size National Bank Notes. Both series are being snapped up at impressive price levels. As expected, high-quality specimens of Fractional Currency are few and far between. In the next market report, I'll give a full update on show activity.

World Coins

World coin enthusiasts continue to find few Choice coins entering the marketplace. In many cases, collector/investors see prices rising at an astounding rate and are reluctant to let material go at current levels. Also, because a large number of U.S. dealers are buying at European shows, foreign collectors are holding their coins to keep them from being exported.
